Anemones Must Be Planted Soon for Spring

A flower enjoyed through the centuries as one of the loveliest harbingers of spring is the Anemone. It is, in fact, the lily-of-the-field mentioned in the Bible as being more beautifully arrayed than Solomon in all his glory—a statement attesting to its beauty as well as age.

In all but the warm areas of the state, the Anemone and its handsome relative, the Ranunculus, should be planted within the next few weeks if their beauty is to awaken your garden this coming spring.

Both the Anemone and Ranunculus are hardy bulb flowers. In mild winter area, plant them in light, loamy soil. Before planting, however, soak Anemone bulbs in water for one hour, and Ranunculus for two or three hours. In cold winter areas, wait until early spring before setting out your bulbs. Ranunculus bulbs set an inch deep, claws downward, and Anemone, three inches deep.

Many Species

There are many species of the Anemone or Windflower, as it is also called. The Anemone coronaria is very familiar, with poppy-like flowers in combinations of red, blue and white in many varieties. The coronaria should have sun while the Italian Anemone, apennina, with daisy-shaped flowers of sky blue prefers the shade. Another Anemone type for early spring is the Pasque Flower (A. Pulsatilla). For early summer, the Snowdrop Anemone (A. Sylvestris) offers its white cupped flowers in shady nooks.

Anemones are effective when planted in rock gardens, borders, pots or in massed effect with the Ranunculus.

Though it resembles the meadow Buttercup, the Ranunculus is really related to a large family that includes the Anemone, Delphinium and Clematis. The name Ranunculus is of Latin derivation and means "little frog," referring, of course, to the many species found in the damp meadows where frogs are also found. The Ranunculus asiaticus is commonly called Persian or Turban Ranunculus. Planted now, it will give beautiful spring blooms of cream, white, red, yellow, orange, pink and rose in double or ruffled forms.

Care Told

Care for the Ranunculus just as you do for annuals, advises the California Assn. of Nurserymen. Plant in sun (or half-shade in warm climate) and cover young plants with wire netting as birds will injure the new foliage. This flower can be planted in a mixed border or in containers. It is also a fine flower for cutting.

Make it a special point to stop by your nurseryman's store and obtain some bulbs of the Ranunculus and Anemone for immediate planting. Their bright colors will give a wonderful lift to your garden in spring.
